Breath, Inflection and Meaning

Read the following sentence as many times as you can on one breath. This sentence is filled with words that use air.

He hid at home and sobbed when his sister seized whatever he had on top in the thin five-shelved closet.

Take a deep breath and see how far you can read through this grouping of words. Make sure you are making each of the words come alive as you say them. Don't just race through them -- interpret!

Collecting and projecting receding and speeding and shocking and rocking and darting and parting and treading and spreading and whizzing and hissing and dripping and skipping and hitting and splitting and shining and twining and rattling and battling and shaking and quaking and pouring and roaring and waving and raving and flowing and going

and heaving and cleaving and foaming and roaming and moaning and groaning and dropping and hopping

Say the sentence "I like Bill." to bring out the following:

- You mean literally what the words say; it's direct statement of fact.
- You're clarifying that you don't love Bill.
- You don't like Bill at all, and you're shocked that anyone would accuse you of liking Bill.
- You like Bill and not that other person.
- You're answering the question "Who likes Bill?"
- You're answering the question "Who could possibly care for icky old Bill?"
- You more than like Bill, and have plans for what might happen with Bill.
