

Erin McGaughan

is a performance coach, director and performer, active in the Seattle region for more than 20 years. She has a Masters in Acting, with training in physical theatre styles ranges from ballet to stage combat, commedia to tap, Suzuki stomping to trapeze and other circus arts. She built 10 years' experience as a professional stage actor before she moved into recording, songwriting, directing, and coaching.

Her musical and vocal training runs from classical bel canto to Shakespearean production, accent and dialect coaching, jazz, pop, country, rock, cabaret, as well as rehabilitative techniques, vocal hygiene and life-long vocal health. She's taught acting and presentation at pro, semi-pro, college and grade school levels.

Erin was a recruiter, curator and speaker coach for TEDx Rainier, the region's largest such event. She has published and led workshops for the Women Presidents Organization, National Centers for Spiritual Living, WeWork, and others. She's also coaching ministerial students in homiletics and pulpit presence, and coaching Toastmasters leaders in persuasive pitch techniques.

Erin directs music at Seattle Unity, and also manages an interfaith network of 200+ local artists who serve in venues including churches, temples, and spiritual centers of all kinds. She is also a trusted Worship Arts consultant for ministry leaders across the country. Learn more at www.erinmccaughan.com.

6/19

Erin opening for Brené Brown

erin@erinmccaughan.com